CLINICAL AND SCIENTIFIC LEADERSHIP

Giuseppe Curigliano, MD, PhD, is head of the Division of Early Drug Development at European Institute of Oncology, in Milan, Italy, where besides his clinical work. He is professor of Medical Oncology at University of Milano. He is a clinician and researcher specializing in breast cancer. Dr. Curigliano earned his MD at the Università Cattolica del Sacro Cuore, in Rome, Italy. He also holds a PhD in clinical pharmacology from the University of Pisa. He completed his postdoctoral fellowship in South Carolina Medical School, Charleston (1993-1994) working on clinical immunology studies in solid tumors. He moved to the Comprehensive Cancer Center at Columbia University in New York City, NY, USA (1995-96). This working experience was concentrated on molecular epidemiology studies related to carcinogen-DNA adducts, susceptibility genes characterization in solid tumors; gene-environment interactions and development of monoclonal antibodies for carcinogen DNA-adducts detection. He moved to the European Institute of Oncology in 1999. He applied to clinical research his strong basic science background leading several translational research protocols on breast and urogenital cancer. He was committed for 5 years in the phase I unit, contributing to successful development of several targeted agents and cytotoxics. Since 2001 he is adjunct professor of Clinical Pharmacology at University of Milan, concentrating his lectures on clinical pharmacology of anticancer biologicals and cytotoxics. In 2010 he visited Dana Farber Cancer Institute, Harvard Medical School, Boston, USA. He is co-chair of Division of Clinical Oncology coordinating clinical and comprehensive management of patients with all solid tumors (lung, gastrointestinal, urogenital, breast, soft tissue sarcomas and rare tumors). He is an active member of the American Society of Clinical Oncology (ASCO), the European Society of Medical Oncology (ESMO) and the Associazione Italiana di Oncologia Medica (AIOM). He is founding member of/and scientific coordinator for the International Cardio-Oncology Society (ICOS). He serves on the Clinical Research Committee of the AIOM. He serves as faculty member in the European School of Oncology (ESO). He is member of the Scientific Advisory Committee of the International Breast Cancer Study Group (IBCSG) and of the Breast International Group (BIG). He is ESMO and ESO Faculty Member for Breast Cancer. He served on the Program Scientific Committee of ESMO 2012 and 2013. He served on the Program Scientific Committee of the St Gallen conference 2009, 2011 and 2013 as scientific secretary. Since October 2011 to May 2012 he served as a Susan G. Komen for the Cure Scholar. He served on the Program Scientific and Executive Committees of the IMPAKT Breast Cancer Conference from 2011 to 2015. He served as Chair for the St Gallen conference 2017.

Dr. Curigliano's research experiences include principle or coinvestigator work in several phase I-II clinical trials with targeted agents, cytotoxic and endocrine agents in breast cancer. He has been also involved as principal investigator in several phase I studies with peptide vaccines for breast cancer (either in the adjuvant either in the metastatic setting). Dr Curigliano's research interests include the biology of breast cancer, predictive markers of response to therapy and new anti-cancer agents. He is the coordinator of a research platform on new drug development at European Institute of Oncology. Dr. Curigliano has written widely on oncology, including articles in the Journal of Clinical Oncology, Annals of Oncology, European Journal of Cancer (more than 490 peer reviewed article, most of them as first or last author) and several book chapters. He also reviews for a number of journals, including the Journal of Clinical Oncology, Annals of Oncology, the Journal of the National Cancer Institute and the European Journal of Cancer. He is member of the editorial board of Annals of Oncology, Journal of Clinical Oncology. He is associate editor of European Journal of Cancer and Co Editor in Chief of Cancer Treatment Reviews and The Breast. Prof Curigliano serves on the Executive Committee of EUSOMA (European Society of Breast Cancer Specialists) and was elected as member of the ESMO Nominating Committee in 2017.

TRANSLATIONAL CANCER RESEARCH

There is a major trend of importance in the oncology field. The growing importance of translational science in oncology care is the actual milestone. Increasingly, our treatment decisions and therapies are being guided by advanced biological insights from molecular and cellular biology and bioinformatics. I hold an undergraduate degree in molecular biology and a PhD in Clinical Pharmacology, and I still find it challenging to stay abreast of these fantastic developments. All my early and actual working activity is within clinical trials with strong translational research. We must continue helping oncologists and clinical investigators understand the science of cancer care through scientific symposia and educational programs. The future of cutting-edge cancer treatments will depend on such understanding. Through its meetings, educational programs, grants, guidelines, publications, and online media, we must bring to the oncology community scientific insights that allow patients and clinicians to engage in 21st century oncology. I established a phase I-II Trials Unit at European Institute of Oncology using the facilities of the IEO Translational Research Campus. I obtained several research grants in clinical translational immunology (mechanisms of resistance to anti-HER2 therapies) and in translational cancer research. I am actually involved as principal investigator in a translational trial committed to develop xenograft models. The experimental plan to achieve this objective will contemplate several intermediate endpoint: i) generation of primary human breast xenografts using the above mentioned cohort of patients, ii) set up of in vivo RNAi screening using cells from primary xenografts as cancer cells in the assay, and iii) whole exome sequencing of primary tumor samples, primary xenografts and secondary tumors obtained from RNAi screening. Identification of molecular events by exome sequencing tools in tumor xenografts obtained from collected tumor tissues, may be crucial to understand molecular mechanisms inducing resistance to first line therapy. I am also committed in a national grant research protocol on stem cell research. I also the PI of the TRANSCAN project on the prognostic value of tumor-infiltrating lymphocytes on residual disease after primary chemotherapy for triple-negative breast cancer. The development of surrogates for drug efficacy is becoming a major challenge in clinical research. Such surrogates could dramatically speed-up drug development by allowing quick selection of successful compounds, avoiding large adjuvant trials and identifying patients at very good outcome. In breast cancer, pathological complete response (pCR) and Ki67 drops have been proposed as surrogates for the efficacy of chemotherapy and endocrine therapy. FDA recently proposed the use of pCR for drug approval, emphasizing the need for research in this field. Preclinical studies have suggested that cytotoxic agents may partly exert their antitumor activity by inducing immune response against tumor cells. The immunogenic cell death induced by cytotoxic agents allows antigen cross-presentation, activation of dendritic cells and induction of tumor-specific cytotoxic T cells. A few studies on small breast cancer series have suggested that cytotoxic agents, including anthracyclines and taxanes, can induce tumor-specific immune response, and that exposure to such drugs could lead to the attraction of lymphocytes in the tumor bed. With the aim to identify a new potential tool for a better selection of high-risk patients eligible for postneoadjuvant investigational drugs and that could also represent a new surrogate for neoadjuvant drug efficacy for TNBC, we are evaluating whether the magnitude of lymphocytic infiltration in the residual disease after NACT could allow identifying a population of TNBC patients at good outcome. We are also assessing expression of cytotoxic T-lymphocyte-associated antigen 4 (CTLA-4), the programmed death 1 (PD-1) receptor and its two known ligands, PD-L1 (also known as B7-H1 or CD274) and PD-L2 (also known as B7-DC or CD273).

I'm actually the PI of the first trial on precision medicine in metastatic breast cancer (trial fully supported by Italian Association for Cancer Research).

VISION STATEMENT

These are both exciting and challenging times in the fight against cancer. Advances in our knowledge of cancer are resulting in the fulfillment of the promise of precision cancer medicine for an increasing number of patients across multiple tumor types. Unprecedented advances are occurring in multiple areas including genomics, targeted therapeutics, and immunology, just to name a few. At the same time, we are facing as a field and as a community tremendous challenges including decreased research funding at a critical time when more resources are needed, the increased instability of academic careers, and the greater need to foster collaborative research and programs, to train our new generation of scientists, and to close the gap between the basic and clinical sciences.

Moving forward, cancer research globally must further expand its efforts on advancing regulatory science and policy, integrating research and patient care, fostering greater patient participation in clinical trials, and cultivating a skilled and diverse cancer research workforce. This work, together with developing partnerships with other organizations and initiatives to raise research funds, is a priority that needs to be continued and expanded. And finally, and perhaps one of the most important tasks at hand, it is the goal to continue to promote the recruitment and retention of superb talent to cancer research, to provide resources and funding to our trainees, and to facilitate access to our meetings and conferences. Most importantly, we need to continue to support a robust research agenda on multiple levels at a time when, more than ever, research is the answer to the cancer problem and pivotal discoveries are making it possible to visualize a future when cancer will no longer be a leading cause of death.

Giuseppe Curigliano, MD, PhD, is Chair of the Division of Early Drug Development at European Institute of Oncology, in Milan, Italy, where besides his clinical work. He is a clinician and researcher specializing in breast cancer. He is professor of Medical Oncology at University of Milano. Dr. Curigliano earned his MD at the Università Cattolica del Sacro Cuore, in Rome, Italy. He also holds a PhD in clinical pharmacology from the University of Pisa. He completed his postdoctoral fellowship in South Carolina Medical School, Charleston (1993-1994) working on clinical immunology studies in solid tumors. He moved to the Comprehensive Cancer Center at Columbia University in New York City, NY, USA (1995-96). This working experience was concentrated on molecular epidemiology studies related to carcinogen-DNA adducts, susceptibility genes characterization in solid tumors; gene-environment interactions and development of monoclonal antibodies for carcinogen DNA-adducts detection. He moved to the European Institute of Oncology in 1999. He applied to clinical research his strong basic science background leading several translational research protocols on breast and urogenital cancer. He was committed for 3 years in the phase I unit, contributing to successful development of several targeted agents and cytotoxics. Since 2001 he is assistant professor of Clinical Pharmacology at University of Milan. In 2010 he visited Dana Farber Cancer Institute, Harvard Medical School, Boston, USA. He is co-chair of Division of Clinical Oncology coordinating clinical and comprehensive management of patients with all solid tumors (lung, gastrointestinal, urogenital, breast, soft tissue sarcomas and rare tumors). His clinical experience is based on a daily clinical management of patients with solid tumors, within a comprehensive cancer center accepting every year at least 85.000 first diagnosis patients. He practice in the in patient, out patient and day hospital setting. He served for 3 years on emergency and palliative care section of the Division. He is an active member of the American Society of Clinical Oncology (ASCO), the European Society of Medical Oncology (ESMO) and the Associazione Italiana di Oncologia Medica (AIOM). He is founding member of/and scientific coordinator for the International Cardio-Oncology Society (ICOS). He serves on the Clinical Research Committee of the AIOM. He serves as faculty member in the European School of Oncology (ESO). He is member of the Scientific Advisory Committee of the International Breast Cancer Study Group (IBCSG) and of the Breast International Group (BIG). He is ESMO and ESO Faculty Member for Breast Cancer. He served on the Program Scientific Committee of ESMO 2012 and 2013. He served on the Program Scientific Committee of the St Gallen conference 2009, 2011 and 2013, 2015 as scientific secretary. From 2017 to 2025 he served as Saint Gallen Scientific Chair. Since October 2011 to May 2012 he served as a Susan G. Komen for the Cure Scholar. He served on the Program Scientific and Executive Committees of the IMPAKT Breast Cancer Conference 2013.

Dr. Curigliano's research experiences include principle or coinvestigator work in several phase I-II clinical trials with targeted agents, cytotoxic and endocrine agents in breast cancer. He has been also involved as principal investigator in several phase I studies with peptide vaccines for breast cancer (either in the adjuvant either in the metastatic setting). Dr Curigliano's research interests include the biology of breast cancer, predictive markers of response to therapy and new anti-cancer agents. He is the coordinator of a research platform on new drug development in breast cancer at European Institute of Oncology. Dr. Curigliano has written widely on oncology, including articles in the Journal of Clinical Oncology, Annals of Oncology, European Journal of Cancer (more than 850 peer reviewed article, most of them as first and last author) and several book chapters. He also reviews for a number of journals, including the Journal of Clinical Oncology, Annals of Oncology, the Journal of the National Cancer Institute, the European Journal of Cancer and many other “breast oriented journals”. He is member of the editorial board of Annals of Oncology, Journal of Clinical Oncology. He is associate editor of European Journal of Cancer and Co Editor in Chief of Cancer Treatment Reviews and The Breast. Prof Curigliano serves on the Executive Committee of EUSOMA (European Society of Breast Cancer Specialists) and was elected as member of the ESMO Nominating Committee in 2017. In 2018 he covered the role of Chair of the Scientific Council for the Lega Italiana Lotta ai Tumori, for which now serves in the Executive Committee.
